Band of Brothers is a 2001 ten-part television World War II miniseries. The executive producers were Steve Spielberg and Tom Hanks, who had collaborated on the World War II film Saving Private Ryan (1998).

The narrative centers on the experiences of E Company ("Easy Company") of the 2nd Battalion, 506th Parachute Infantry Regiment 101st Airborne Division of the United States Army. The series covers Easy's basic jump training at the Currahee training site at Tocca, Georgia, followed by the American airborne landings in Normandy; Operation Market Garden, the Battle of Bastogne and on to the end of the war, including the capitulation of Germany and the taking of the Kehlsteinhaus (Hitler's Eagle's Nest).

The series was nominated for nineteen Emmy Awards, and won six, including "Outstanding miniseries," "Outstanding Casting for a miniseries, Movie, or a Special," and "Outstanding Directing for a miniseries, Movie, or a Dramatic Special." It also won a Golden Globe for "Best miniseries, or Motion Picture Made for Television," an American Film Institute award, and was selected for a Peabody Award for "...relying on both history and memory to create a new tribute to those who fought to preserve liberty." It also won a 2003 Writers Guild Award (Television, Adapted Long Form) for episode six ("Bastogne").
